JESS HUGHES / MILLERSVILLE UNIVERSITY

Jess King held a rally at Millersville University on Wednesday, October 3. King was met with raucous protestations; each time he could turn to his right, he was answered with shouts over several Democratic senators. Despite this, he pointed out that he has finished asking his opening statement when he had aimed to state “Anne Daughter’s.” King survived the FFFFFFour further explanation of this phrase, referring to how his friend would frequent, “I survived the FFFFFFour further explanation of this phrase, referring to how his friend would frequent. The phrase is not as common because of its implications. The former White House Staff Secretary presented the court with his documented search warrants and applications for his freshman year of high school on Wednesday, October 3. Millerville University on Wednesday, October 3. King was met with raucous protestations; each time he could turn to his right, he was answered with shouts over several Democratic senators. Despite this, he pointed out that he has finished asking his opening statement when he had aimed to state “Anne Daughter’s.” King survived the FFFFFFour further explanation of this phrase, referring to how his friend would frequent, “I survived the FFFFFFour further explanation of this phrase, referring to how his friend would frequent. The phrase is not as common because of its implications. The former White House Staff Secretary presented the court with his documented search warrants and applications for his freshman year of high school on Wednesday, October 3. The court nominee stated several times “I like beer” making it well known that he liked to party with his friends while pursuing his academic career. King talked about the details of his career. The court nominee stated several times “I like beer” making it well known that he liked to party with his friends while pursuing his academic career. King talked about the details of his career.
The two candidates battling for the chair to congress are Jess King and incumbent republican Congressman Lloyd Smucker. King won uncontended in the democratic party while Smucker came out top over Chester Boeder with 58.54% of republicans.

If you are a registered voter in district 11, Jess King is the clear optimal candidate to represent our district in congress, she is a local business owner and working managing family business for the working class, as well as serving roles such as women’s rights, LGTB rights, civil rights, supporting veterans, supporting farmers, and helping Puerto Rico (its name is a few). King supports reproductive choice since it protects Americans with pro-life arguments, but she feels much more can be done and can be done at the federal level to give everyone affordable healthcare that doesn’t ensure in-surance and pharmaceutical companies continuing to make big profits. She is also a huge proponent of our medical needs, which is the issue of a lot of the high express and headaches that came along with filing for insurance under Obamacare. Eliminating college debt is another issue King values and is passionate about. She is expected to work towards eliminating those costs tremendously.

Lancaster-native Jess King (D) has won over the hearts of many Lancasterians. King is a good representation of what America needs in this time of great upheaval. Amidst all of the chaos and hate that freely flows from the government, various religious groups and downright malicious groups, society needs a leader who can give an ice-cold fact about hate. King is that leader. She is a political candidate that is usually their mother. She is a normal person and wants to expand the system to give everyone affordable healthcare that doesn’t ensure in-surance and pharmaceutical companies continuing to make big profits. She is also a huge proponent of our medical needs, which is the issue of a lot of the high express and headaches that came along with filing for insurance under Obamacare. Eliminating college debt is another issue King values and is passionate about. She is expected to work towards eliminating those costs tremendously.

Lancaster-native Jess King (D) has won over the hearts of many Lancasterians. King is a good representation of what America needs in this time of great upheaval. Amidst all of the chaos and hate that freely flows from the government, various religious groups and downright malicious groups, society needs a leader who can give an ice-cold fact about hate. King is that leader. She is a political candidate that is usually their mother. She is a normal person and wants to expand the system to give everyone affordable healthcare that doesn’t ensure in-surance and pharmaceutical companies continuing to make big profits. She is also a huge proponent of our medical needs, which is the issue of a lot of the high express and headaches that came along with filing for insurance under Obamacare. Eliminating college debt is another issue King values and is passionate about. She is expected to work towards eliminating those costs tremendously.

There are other hashtags being discussed with #HimToo such as #BelieveEvidenceNotGender, #KavanaughNow and #StandWithKavanaugh. Anyone can be sexually assault- ed male or female but going against women who are finally coming out about their abuse should not be looked down upon. This is why men and women are always so afraid to speak up about their abuse because people don’t always believe them and get accused of making things up or lying. The reactions on twitter are pretty one sided. There are a ton of people that are for #HimToo and are tweeting about how Kavanaugh is being falsely accused and women are not to be trusted because of a ‘trend’ of women falsely accusing men. The few people tweeting against #HimToo say it’s a disgrace to #MeToo and disrespectful to the survivors of sexual abuse, which I don’t believe that #MeToo is supposed to be representing for survivors of sexual abuse and now it’s being used against them. There’s all around not to many tweets under the #HimToo tag yet but over time I believe that the lon- ger the Kavanaugh case continues, more people will start to use #HimToo. I don’t think all men accused are guilty, and I don’t believe that all women accusing are telling the truth either. But, I do believe that guilty un- til proven innocent is the best way to go with these cases, because it ends up being a game of cat and mouse.

In the age of #metoo, the Brett Kavanaugh hearings have sparked a movement. #metoo and #himtoo

What we can do about hate in the world we live in?

We all have experienced love at some point in our lives. With the bondage of love being formed at birth, hate gives one a form as well.

That being a hatred of pain and sometimes of various objects or stimuli. Hate can be as simple as someone hav- ing a bad experience in a circus. The incident would take place with a clown, for example, and the person affected would have a disgust for clowns. That disgust is a mild form of hatred.

Hate is also taught; I regret to say it. It becomes a norm in a household that has racism in it. A child that grows up in an atmosphere where people are called names is predominately most likely become racist themselves. This is no fault of their parents or educators but rather their upbringing.

What a person chooses to do with hate falls at the feet of that person: Their actions with their hatred will be what defines them.

On the flip side, love is also taught. You as a person are taught to love your parents, taught to love your children and taught to love that people that your parents loves. This cycle is seen as healthy and something that is natural for people to do, and I want to put forth the opinion that hate can be the same way.

With the exception being the healthiness of hate. Hate is not a bad feeling to have. At any time, I would rather feel love than hate at any instance. Regardless of the futility of spite. I still believe that it is something that we should strive for. Stopping the flow of hate seems to be a step in the right direction to me.

Jess King: The deal candidate

Jess King: The deal candidate

What we can do about hate in the world we live in?

Jess King: The deal candidate

What we can do about hate in the world we live in?

#metoo or #himtoo

In the age of #metoo, the Brett Kavanaugh hearings have sparked a movement.

What we can do about hate in the world we live in?

What we can do about hate in the world we live in?
The 4th annual Millersville Disability Conference took place at the Winter Center, commonly referred to as the VPAC, on Friday September 28th.

The event was organized by Millersville University professor emeritus Dr. Dennis Downy, and was a collaboration of the university with disability advocacy groups, such as Pennhurst Memorial and Preservation Alliance, The ARC of PA, PAR, and PA-TASH.

With 110 attendees, including scholars, advocates, policymakers, and students, this conference opened up a discussion to reflect on historical accomplishments and ways to improve upon the flaws still seen in Pennsylvania’s education system in regards to its impact on the lives and futures of students with disabilities.

The conference mainly focused on how families, both parents and children, are unaware of the educational laws that give the rights of education under the ADA and IDEIA.

They argued that parents cannot be bystanders when their children’s education is being discussed, and especially the importance of each child’s right to have their because, although school district are experts on educational practices, it is the family that best knows their child’s talents and skills.

The conference participants further discussed cases where children and their parents had to fight for education in particular the Gaskin vs Pennsylvania Commonwealth settlement of 2005, regarding compliance with the IDEIA principle of Least Restrictive Environment.

They also discussed the recent Endrew F. vs Douglas County School District case of 2005 where the Supreme Court unanimously decided to overturn the Circuit Court of Appeals decision that special education needed only to be “merely more than de minimis,” or trivial.

The fact that these court cases happened so recently just goes to show how important these issues are.

A history of advocacy took center stage for many of the talks. On one panel advocacy itself was explored. It began with parental advocacy in the 1950s and also explored self-advocacy during the Civil Rights Era with groups like ADAPT that led to the signing of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, as well as massive deinstitutionalization.

The panel then focused on how the baton needs to passed to a newer generation of advocates for education that is inclusive, with leaders that are themselves self-advocates.

Another panel discussed how the students in special education are funneled from support classrooms to employment in primarily daytime workshops, which may offer less than the minimum wage because of impairment laws.

They made it clear that the minimum wage was already not a living wage and that people were being forced to rely on government support. The panel said that this was sadly the result of the rush from deinstitutionalization to something hopefully better but not well researched beforehand.

This issue has now raised the concerns of future inclusion in the workplace for children currently in special education.

The conference ended with a community forum with comments from the audience that raised many concerns regarding the reality of special education.

Demands for better policies and regulations were demanded. Some attendees argued that no matter what challenges a student has they do not deserve deprivation of education.

The question of where we go from here was raised by the attendees of the conference and agreed that they want things to go in an inclusive direction with the students having the autonomy to look for real jobs and life opportunities beyond school.
Fortnite brings exciting additions to gaming world

Paige Bryant, a Millersville student, excitedly plays the popular video game, “Fortnite.”

On Sept. 27, Epic Games released season six of “Fortnite Battle Royale.” The season began with a rough start, especially for Xbox users, but Epic was able to fix the bugs and move forward.

Fortnite can be accessed through Xbox, PlayStation, PC, iOS, and Andriod. In the previous season, season five, a monstrous cube moved around the map, burning runes into the ground at various locations on the game map. Towards the end of the season, the cube found its way to Lost Lake where it melted into the lake itself.

In season six, Fortnite has introduced the cube and lifted the house the characters are in, into the air, creating a massive whirlpool in the center of the lake.

The floating cube and house are now true threats throughout the game—don’t worry, the pets cannot be injured!

This leaves question to what Epic is planning on doing plot-wise as the season progresses. Epic has also placed a cube on a mountain between Pleasant Park and Haunted Hills. In a blog post, Epic stated that this is a plot progression.

Apart from the plot, there are various new features that players can unlock through weekly and daily challenges. Like usual, what players can unlock depends on if they purchase the battle pass or not. Fortnite is free to play, but Epic also offers the option to buy a battle pass for the season.

The battle pass offers more challenges as well as more rewards and higher XP gain. The battle pass is $99.99, or 10 USD.

If players decide to purchase a battle pass, they have the ability to unlock pets, which is a new feature to the season.

The pets are dogs, chameleons, and dragons that rule that the players back and interact with the players on the map.

Epic has also changed much. A few weapons were removed, emotes to defend various points on the map.

Lastly, a new game mode will be released. Instead of going out with an upbeat campfire, Cher crosses this beauty of a song with the command of a true icon and artist.”

Cher is a “Super Trouper” in exciting new album.

Cher has had a long and legendary career in music, film, and television that would be respectable for any artist. Cher continues to act and sing and has no plans of slowing down anytime soon.

This past summer, she returned to the screen in “Mamma Mia! Here We Go Again,” playing her mother, Lily Sbar- dan, in “Mama Mia 2.” Now, while it initially may sound a bit far fetched for Cher to play the mother of Meryl Streep, her performance ended up being the cinematic event of the year. On top of that, a musical about her life will be hitting the Broadway scene this Fall. After her grand return up being the cinematic event of the year. On top of that, a musical about her life will be hitting the Broadway scene this Fall. After her grand return, she has been releasing sneak peaks of the album’s first half, the latter set of songs show a scaled-back cover of an ABBA classic “Mamma Mia”. Cher makes the listener cannot help but swell with joy from the majestic nature of her voice and presence comes through loud and clear.

Cher awakens our inner ‘Dancing Queen’ with new album.

This scaled-back cover gives the listener a true view of Cher’s voice and presence comes through loud and clear. The biggest question is whether or not Epic can keep this up and if the update is done so in season four and five, when the meter runs out on “Fortnite” every three months and some objects from different eras are deployed into the Fortnite Universe in season five.

This leaves question to what Epic is planning on doing plot-wise as the season progresses. Epic has also changed much. A few weapons were removed, emotes to defend various points on the map.

Lastly, a new game mode will be released. Instead of going out with an upbeat campfire, Cher crosses this beauty of a song with the command of a true icon and artist.”

Cher is a “Super Trouper” in exciting new album.
Millersville women's volleyballd continues its winning streak on Saturday, September 29th at Pacilie Gymnasonry where they won their fifth consecutive home match with a 3-1 victory in their first ever match between Bloomsburg University. Overall Millersville has since won eight of its last eleven games improving their score in PSAC play (4-2) and a triumphant start to their conference play since 2002.

At first, Millersville conceeded a slow start in the first set which concluded them to fall behind. Coach Brian Smith noticed this and exclaimed the issue in a timeout in hopes to change the momentum of the game. This encouragement from the coach was definitely needed because in the next seven rallies, Millersville scored six total points. The Marauders then raced in the 7-2 lead in their third set with a total of three perfect kills from Haley Butler and a total of one marvelous kill each from both Chyna Gubbings and Lindsey Blevins, which uplifted the crowd in the stands.

However the errors eventually turned into aggravation when Bloomsburg's, Emma Van Ardela, served and Millersville struggled throughout the rest of the set. Bloomsburg then scored six points and finished the set with 14 kills, two errors, and three blocks.

Luckily in the fourth set, Millersville bounced back and dominated the court with a final score of three and didn't hold back against Bloomsburg. After this miraculous but strenuous victory, Coach Smith commented, “We played well. I truly believe that we can step into the court and compete with any team in the PSAC, but we have to bring out "A" game.”

Saturday was the Marauders' last home game. In the next seven matches, they will be on the road competing in the PSAC beginning with West Chester University on Oct. 2 at 7:00pm. The next home game won't be until Oct. 30 at 1:00 pm against Clarion University.

They quickly found themselves behind again with East Stroudsburg going up 10-0 within the first eight minutes of the game. The kicker for East Stroudsburg, Jordan Walters, hit a 34-yard field goal to put them up 10-0. Just two minutes later Tyler Bender caught a 60-yard pass from quarterback Jake Cuzzillo making the score 10-3. The Marauders special teams kicked of the scoring for Millersville as they got their safety on a mistake by East Stroudsburg's long snapper.

The ball was snapped for a punt and the ball was snapped high and pulled right into the end zone for a Marauders safety.

The next score would not come until the third quarter, Millersville would march down the field on eight plays for 82-yards scoring them their first touchdown of the game. Quarterback Tony Staffieri ran into the end zone for a Marauders touchdown out of the East Stroudsburg lead to the third in the second quarter.

With just under a minute and a half left in the third quarter, Millersville’s kicker Joey Farley, kicked a 26-yard field goal giving Millersville’s first lead of the game. The score at the end of three quarters was 11-10 and this was the Marauders defense needed to secure their first win of the season.

Marauders defense played phenomenally shutting out the East Stroudsburg offense for three of the four quarters. The defense gave up 118 total yards but kept the East Stroudsburg offense out of the end zone after the first quarter concluded.

The Marauders offense would rack up 379 yards in the game. Their rushing attack finally came alive as they rushed for 218 yards. One hundred eighteen of those yards came from quarterback Tony Staffieri extending plays with his legs and making things happen for an offense that has struggled to get going. Staffieri also completed 11 passes for 151 yards and Quarterback Colin Shank would complete one pass for ten yards.

East Stroudsburg came into the game with the leading rusher in the PSAC Jaimie Anderson. Millersville’s defense was able to hold Anderson to just 81 yards. East Stroudsburg only ran for 109 yards on the day.

This win gives the Marauders' football team a little light in a season that has not been great. The Marauders showed great fight and never gave up after East Stroudsburg put ten unanswered points up on the board. Both sides of the ball grinded out this win and overall was a great team effort to give Millersville their first win of the season.

Millersville looks to build on this win and hopefully get another one as they head to Lock Haven University on Saturday afternoon.